POLICE RAIDS: Several targets rounded up as crime crackdown reaps its reward

Burglary suspects arrested in swoops

By Matthew Mohan-Hickson

matthew.hickson@hertsessexnews.co.uk

SEVEN suspected burglars were arrested by Hertfordshire police officers following a series of early morning raids in Harlow.

The dawn swoops were carried out in Fern Hill at around 5am last Thursday in connection with a string of burglaries at petrol stations and shops.

Seven people were arrested on suspicion of conspiracy to burgle during the raids.

Operation

Around 50 officers, including firearms officers and the Essex dog unit, carried out warrants in Fern Hill during the operation, which was led by Hertfordshire Constabulary.

The arrests came as part of a joint investigation by Herts, Essex and Kent forces into 42 commercial burglaries in which large quantities of cigarettes and cash were taken.

Petrol stations and stores across the three counties, including three in East Hertfordshire, have been targeted by the burglars since August.

All of those arrested are currently being held in custody in Hertfordshire. Officers from Herts Police's Specialist Investigation Team are leading the criminal investigation.

Detective inspector Anna Wright, from Herts Police, said: "We are very pleased with the results of today's operation and this is an excellent example of joint policing to tackle cross border crime.

"We have been gathering intelligence on this crime series for some time and I am pleased that we have finally secured a number of arrests in connection with these offences."

The chief inspector for East Hertfordshire, Gerry McDonald, took part in this morning's operation.

At 6.46am he tweeted: "Involved in crime – please open the door when we come knocking in force this morning."

He said: "This was a carefully planned and well executed warrant.

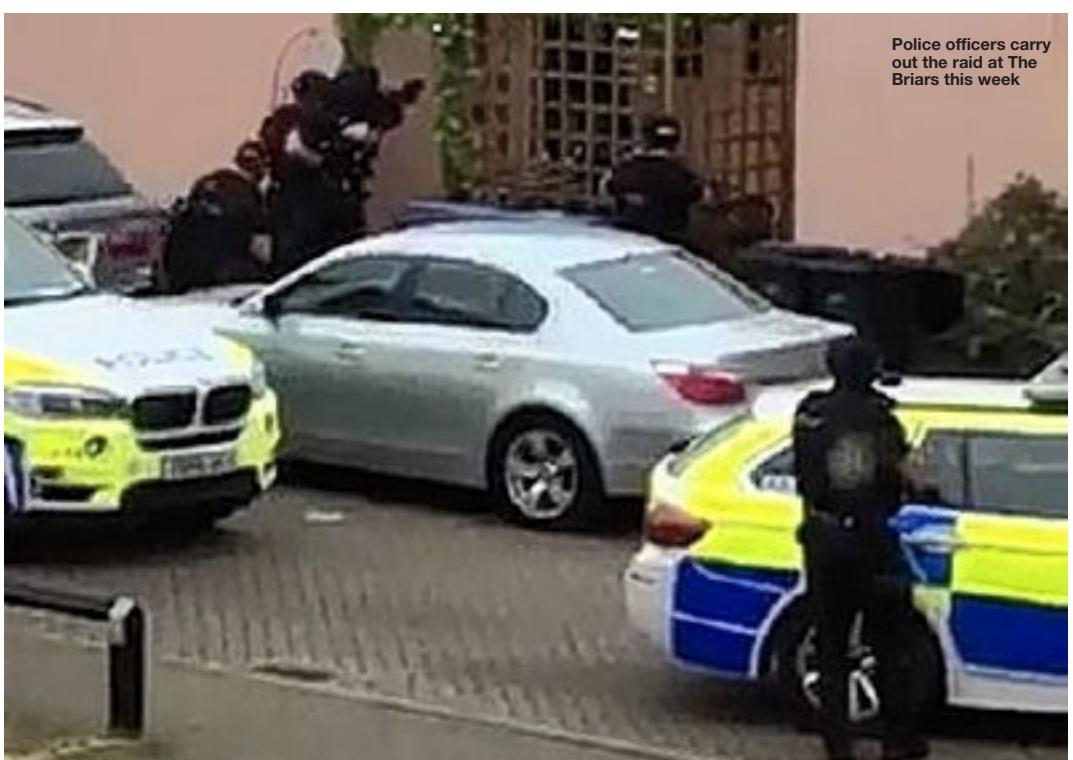

"It highlights the excellent partnership work with Hertfordshire Police and Kent Police on this investigation, as well as with the local authority.

Concerns

This action also highlights our ongoing work to address concerns raised by people in Harlow.

"We are currently in the middle project to tackle issues such as violent crime and anti-social behaviour in the town centre and around the district.

"We have already seen success with this through the dispersal order in the town centre, additional foot patrols and working with businesses in the night-time economy."

Police officers carry out the raid at The Briars this week

Police with 'little machine guns' execute warrant

A MAN from Harlow has been charged after an armed police raid.

The raid took place following the execution of a warrant at a property in The Briars, last Thursday afternoon.

A large number of police cars and armed officers with "little machine guns" had been spotted raiding the home at around 4.30pm.

Kirk Bernard, 46, of The Briars, Harlow, has now been charged for two counts of possession of a controlled drug.

One concerned resident, who asked to remain anonymous, said shortly after the raid: "There were three police cars but a load of armed officers with little machine guns.

"There's still police going in and out now. They came out with a big black box.

"There has been a lot of trouble here, there's a drug problem here."

Bernard is due to appear at Chelmsford Crown Court on Tuesday, December 12.

Investigator posed as a child to ensnare pervert, 50, before secret get-together

Sting man admits he tried to meet boy

By Sophie Finnegan

newsdesk@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A MAN who was snared by a undercover sting had attempted to meet up with what he thought was a 15-year old boy after messaging a bogus account.

Roland Ford, 50, of Wedgewood Drive, Harlow, was arrested by police near The Stow shopping centre on June 20 after a male private investigator, who works as part of CSE Interceptors, set up the bogus account on gay dating app Grindr and used a stock image of a boy who was aged 15.

The investigator was monitoring the account when it was contacted by the defendant.

Ford's account named 'Harrowlow' indicated he was 50 years of age and messaged the account saying "Hi", to which the fake account replied with "Hey".

The defendant then asked: "You okay?" and the investigator replied "Other than being bored yeah. Started our school holidays and I'm bored already lol".

Young

Ford then went on to say: "What would you like to be doing?" to which the bogus account replied with: "Don't know just hate being stuck indoors".

Six minutes into the conversation, Ford asked the account how old he was and was told the boy was 15.

Ford replied: "Oh sorry, didn't know you were that young. Was going to ask you whether you

Roland Ford is led away by police after his arrest in June wanted your **** sucked but you're too young for that.

The conversation then moved on to make arrangements to meet up, while the private investigator asked Ford to send a picture of his face.

Essex Police were contacted and two officers were dispatched to apprehend Ford.

Ford had told the fake account he had a BMW but instead arrived in a red Vauxhall Astra, which officers pulled over.

Upon arrest, Ford told the officers: "I would not do that, I have been done for that before".

He was taken to Harlow police station and his vehicle was searched.

Lubricant

Officers found unused condoms and lubricant inside the vehicle and similar items were also discovered at his home address during a search.

On his computer, officers discovered his last Google search was 'gay teen tube' and the last website he visited was gaybystube.com.

During police interview, copies of the full chat were shown to the defendant who answered no comment to all questions.

Ford was previously convicted of sexual activity with a male child under 16 and was jailed until his release on February 20, 2015.

The sexual harm prevention order put in place prevented him from contacting the complainant and being in contact with males under the age of 16, including by electronic means.

At Chelmsford Crown Court, Ford pleaded guilty to both counts of arranging commission of a child sex offence and breach of a sexual harm prevention order.

After being partially heard on Monday, Judge Patricia Lynch QC adjourned the case for sentencing until November 13.

Police on the scene after Andrejs Arhipovs was found dead in Milwards

Death of father found in his car was 'accidental'

Man had suffered head injury in fall

By Hannah Kane
hannah.kane@essexlive.news

A FATHER found dead in a car suffered a serious head injury after falling down the stairs while going to collect some cannabis, an inquest has heard.

Andrejs Arhipovs was found in a Volvo outside his home address in Milwards, Harlow, by his son on May 28.

The 39-year-old father was rushed to Princess Alexandra Hospital at around 11.45pm, but sadly died at around 1am the following morning.

Accident

An inquest into Mr Arhipovs' death concluded it to be an accident, following a police investigation that saw three men arrested on suspicion of murder.

They have since been released without charge.

At the inquest held on Tuesday, it was heard that the post mortem gave the cause of death as severe head injury.

Toxicology reports found that Mr Arhipovs was highly intoxicated, with 245mg of alcohol in every 100mg of blood.

Use of cannabis was also found.

DCI Stephen Jennings, of Essex and Kent Police's serious crime unit, said: "The deceased did have an injury at the back of his head."

"He had fallen down the stairs in Peterborough. As the case progressed, this appeared to be the case."

"We started to look at where the car had been and spoke to a number of associates at the time, not suspected of being involved."

"They had gone to Peterborough believed to be involved with cannabis at some point."

"One of them said they met at a car park and CCTV shows them there in good humour."

During a search of one address in Peterborough, a part of the bottom of the stairs was broken off.

DCI Jennings said: "There is a possibility that this was where it had taken place but we cannot be sure. The post mortem shows there was significant skull fracture, a single start line that would be consistent with a step."

Facial

Mr Arhipovs also had no facial injuries consistent with an assault.

Senior coroner Caroline Beasley Murray then concluded his death as an accident.

She said: "In the light of DCI Jennings' evidence and that is of course given in the light of the pathology evidence, on the balance of probabilities this was an accident."

"I am sorry for his family's loss."

Heartfelt tribute to Hunsdon stalwart who has died aged 86

HUNSDON is mourning the loss of a man who was at the heart of the community for decades.

Former post office owner and parish councillor John Ashley MBE died on Wednesday, October 11, aged 86, after being diagnosed with pancreatic cancer.

Mr Ashley, who was made an MBE for services to the community in 2002, was a well-known face in Hunsdon in a variety of roles dating back to 1969, when he took over the running of the general store and post office.

He moved to Hunsdon with his wife Brenda, known as Betty, whom he had married in 1954 and they had a son and daughter together.

They ran the shop together until 1992.

Council

Mr Ashley also served as a parish councillor, holding the office of vice-chairman of the council.

He then filled the role of parish clerk and following his retirement acted as parish paths warden, watching over the village's public footpaths.

He was also a member of both Hunsdon History Society and the Gardening Club, and helped organise the village's annual fete.

David Gibbs, former chairman of the parish council, said: "John was famous for his sometimes forthright views, on which he rarely backed down."

"A gentleman with a dry sense of humour; always willing to help, courteous and polite – attitudes belonging to his generation."

Perfect for business lunches and meeting friends. Authentic Turkish cuisine and a good selection of vegetarian dishes and fresh salads too.

Farmers' market that has run in Matching Tye since Villagers come out in force to mark ten years of stalls in hall

THE Charity Farmers Market celebrated its tenth anniversary last week at Matching Village Hall.

The market has stayed popular for ten years within the community by offering local produce to the residents while also providing the funds needed to maintain the village hall.

Don Cramphorn, who has been market co-ordinator since it began, said: "We had a great day. It's a friendly atmosphere and a community event for the local villagers."

The market, in Matching Tye, has about 21 stalls mostly providing food, such as fruit and veg, with a few craft stalls also set up. The produce is sourced from within in a 30-mile radius, offering residents a "home-grown" feel.

Mr Cramphorn said the anniversary market day was a success: "We usually get 160 to 170 people who come through the door and we had 280 residents and neighbours visit the market on Saturday."

The market is run by a group of volunteers who all work to benefit the village hall - where it takes place.

It was opened by special guest and local resident Angela Nilsen, who was food editor for the BBC Good Food Magazine for ten years.

Thankful for the continuing support of the charity market, Mr Cramphorn said: "There are many people who have helped the market to thrive, and local businesses have helped with finances, and I was able to say thank you to them."

The market has run on the third Saturday of every month at Matching Village Hall since October 2007.

Greater Anglia staff to go on strike next month

GREATER Anglia staff will go on strike next month as part of a national rail service walkout.

Rail union RMT has confirmed that staff will strike for 48 hours from November 8 over the role of guards.

Along with Greater Anglia, several other services across the country will also be taking part, including Southern, South Western, Merseyrail and Arriva Rail North.

The news comes after the union called for Greater Anglia to be stripped of its licence after safety "deficiencies" were uncovered over the use of replacement staff during strike periods.

The union said it had received a letter from ORR, the rail safety regulator, revealing it had identified a number of areas with deficiencies which needed to be addressed, including training and safety validation during a recent strike.

The letter said: "AGA have acknowledged the failings in the above areas and agreed that contingent staff will not be used until the issues have been rectified to the satisfaction of the ORR."

RMT General Secretary Mick Cash has written an open letter to the company.

It reads: "That you have not demonstrated your ability to carry out such basic items of health and safety management must bring into question the suitability of your organisation to run passenger services in the first place."

Frustrated man sets up CCTV cameras to thwart fly-tippers

Road between Harlow and Epping blighted by abandoned trash and furniture

By Adam Spartley
newsdesk@hertessexnews.co.uk

A FRUSTRATED resident has installed his own CCTV cameras in a bid to halt fly-tipping on a road between Harlow and Epping.

Rye Hill Road, a picturesque two mile thoroughfare between the two towns, is often blighted by the sight of trash abandoned on its grassy verges.

Despite being blessed with hedgerows, the isolation of the road also offers fly-tippers an easy opportunity to rid themselves of rubbish.

Signposts

The efforts of the respective councils to stop the problem have been in vain with residents now speaking out about the growing brazenness of the criminals in spite of newly-erected signposts.

"It's the size of the loads being tipped that is most noticeably increasing," said Frank James.

"Recently, I've seen the entire road blocked twice, once by the remains of a kitchen refurbishment and once by conifers branches."

Mr James and his wife Karen have been residents of Rye Hill

Road for 20 years, and have managed to combat waste being dumped directly outside of their home by installing their own CCTV cameras.

"The council should install cover cameras along this road," added Mrs James.

"It's nice that the signs have been put up.

"But the people responsible don't care."

"Cameras need to be enforced for it to be a deterrent."

Fellow resident Tom Reynolds supports the position put forward by the married couple.

He said: "The council have signs saying there's CCTV in use but I think it's a bluff, and obviously so do the people committing the crime."

Cases of fly-tipping in England have increased for the third year in a row, at a cost of £50 million pound to the taxpayer.

As new figures reveal the issue is now costing Essex more than £1 million pounds each year; it is the county's country lanes and woodlands that are most visibly blighted by the mindless act.

As bags of hardcore and green waste continue to pile up alongside anti fly-tipping signs, the onus for change is being put on Harlow and Epping residents who could be contributing to the epidemic by hiring unlicensed traders.

Rogue trader

Unwittingly paying a rogue trader to remove your waste materials could land you with a criminal record and an unlimited fine.

To ensure that you do not become another victim to this mindless crime always ask to see a valid waste carriers registration number, and make sure you are given a transfer notice or receipt.

You can report fly-tipping by calling Harlow Council on 01249 446655.

■ For more information on how to dispose of waste correctly, visit the Crimenotcare website.

County council receives £9m to beat traffic jams

MORE than £9 million has been secured by Essex County Council to tackle congestion and improve key routes across the county.

The key infrastructure funding, which was announced by Transport Secretary Chris Grayling last week, offers a huge boost for those who use the M11 and A120, as well as other surrounding roads.

£4.09 million has been promised by the Department for Transport towards a £10 million scheme to upgrade Junction 8 on the M11.

This key junction can often become a pinch point for commuters and holidaymakers using the M11, A120 and nearby London Stansted Airport.

The improvement also helps to support the local plans in the area, in particular that of Uttlesford, but also East Hertfordshire.

The scheme is being part-funded by the South East Local Enterprise Partnership (SELEP) and the Greater Cambridgeshire and Peterborough LEP as well as Stansted Airport.

In addition, £4.95 million has been pledged towards new slip roads linking the A120 to Millennium Way giving much-needed relief to the notorious pinch-point at Galley's Corner.

The scheme will also provide better access to Freeport Shopping Village.

Given the scheme's importance to accommodating growth it is being part funded by Braintree District Council, Highways England and Essex County Council.

MP's Commons call for new hospital 'fit for the 21st century'

Halfon says there is great need for health campus

By Michael Mutch
newsdesk@hertssexpressnews.co.uk

HARLOW'S MP Robert Halfon has called for capital funding to build a new hospital "fit for the 21st century" in the town.

Speaking in the House of Commons, Mr Halfon – who was first elected for Harlow in 2010 – told Westminster Hall that the current Princess Alexandra Hospital is not fit for purpose after more than 50 years of service has seen its infrastructure deteriorate.

In 2016, the hospital was judged as 'overall inadequate' by the Care Quality Commission. Mr Halfon says that alongside others he has worked hard to improve the health care services but funding for a new hospital is much needed to 'bring health care in Harlow into the 21st century'.

He said: "I have worked to secure extra funding and more doctors and nurses for our hospital, and the new leadership team tirelessly do everything possible to improve performance. There is, however, only so much that can be done at the hospital as it stands."

"It is for those reasons that I am putting forward the case today for capital funding for a new health campus in Harlow."

Mr Halfon told those in attendance that the hospital's current state makes the working lives for its staff much harder and puts the capacity of care for those in need at serious risk.

He added that this becomes "strikingly clear" when he hears reports of sewage and rain water flowing into the hospital's operating theatres.

The 2016 CQC report stated that the environment was "one of the top risks" for the trust and a 2013 survey found that 56 per cent of the hospital's estate was unacceptable.

Changes to local facilities have made Princess Alexandra fundamental to health and wellbeing to the growing population of Harlow, as well as parts of Hertfordshire and Epping Forest, with occupancy levels running greater than 96 per cent.

This adds increasing pressure on the Emergency Department, with patient waiting time breaching the four hour and 12-hour targets, according to the CQC.

The hospital is also experiencing staff shortages, which Mr Halfon described as a "perpetual worry". CQC inspectors found that wards were "struggling to cope" with the number of patients and that staff were moved from one ward to another to cover shortages.

In autumn 2016, Secretary of State for Health, Jeremy Hunt, requested that the hospital board, local Clinical Commissioning Group and local authority partners produce a Strategic Outline Case.

They deemed "a new hospital on a green field site, potentially as part of a broader health campus, to be the most affordable solution for the local system and the solution that would deliver most benefit to our population".

The new Health Campus would bring together all the services required such as emergency and GP services, physiotherapy, social care as well as a new ambulance hub and a centre for nursing and healthcare training.

The proposal has been supported by CCGs and local bodies and hospital trusts. A joint letter has also been signed by over ten councils, including Harlow, Epping Forest, Essex County Council and the Greater London Authority.

However, some NHS England officials have suggested that due to capital funding constraints a refurbishment would be more fitting than the development of a brand new hospital. A solution which Mr Halfon described as "the equivalent of an Elastoplast; a short term option".

Harlow's MP asked for assurances from the health minister that the proposal for a new hospital would not be obstructed by officials at NHS England.

He added that the cost of a new hospital would be in the region of £280m to £490m.

Mr Halfon said: "The creation of a Health Campus is vital, not only for Harlow, but the surrounding area.

"The infrastructure the Health Campus would create is fundamental to vitality of community and also of the entire region the Princess Alexandra serves.

He concluded by saying: "I have visited the Princess Alexandra Hospital many times.

"I defy the minister to find more professional and dedicated staff, doctors and nurses, working day and night to look after the people of Harlow and the surrounding area.

"I've seen incredible work in the A&E, intensive care and the maternity and children's units. That is why I know the staff are second to none. However, this professionalism and hard work will go to waste unless our hospital is fit for purpose."

"I urge the minister to do everything possible to ensure that Harlow has a hospital fit for the 21st century."

Makeover students build a future in construction

Teens excel in learn a trade challenge

By Michael Mutch

newsdesk@hertessexnews.co.uk

A MAKEOVER on a Harlow school has given teenage volunteers access to a construction qualification.

Burnt Mill Academy won a national competition earlier this year with Absolute Radio, Wickes and Volunteer It Yourself (VIY), which combines volunteering and DIY by challenging young people to learn a trade and building skill.

Forty students spent a week with the VIY team to transform an area of the school grounds.

Year 10 and 11 students worked on an outside area to remove a series of old planters to create an outdoor performance or assemble space, as well as building a new raised planter decorated in school house colours.

"This project has been so good because it's real-life. Often, students make a work bench out of new wood, but with this they have had to make good and recycle. It really has been a 'wow' project.

"Every single one of the students has been absolutely amazing.

"They have been extremely respectful, worked well as a team, very polite, listened to their ment-

Students can use the entry level qualification to work towards a qualification in construction.

Toby May, a Year 10 student, is keen to pursue a career in carpentry and said: "My dad is an engineer and he had taught me the basics of DIY, but what I have learnt here is more advanced.

"I am looking forward to seeing the outcome of our work."

Tyler Joseph, aged 15, said: "I have learnt basic DIY skills which will help me in the future if I buy a house and want to put shelves up, for example.

"Now, I would know how to use the tools to do the job."

"I have helped the school a little bit and that feels pretty good."

The students' work earned them a City & Guilds qualification

Railcard discounts for 26-30 year olds

GREATER Anglia is set to trial a brand new railcard exclusively for 26-30 year olds – which will entitle them to a third off all train journeys.

As reported by MoneySavingExpert, it will be first introduced by Greater Anglia Railways from early December, with 10,000 initially available.

The Rail Delivery Group, who represents train companies, have refused to comment on whether there are plans afoot for the scheme to be rolled out further in the future.

Document

However, it has been reported online that a document circulated on a UK rail forum – which appeared to be an internal Rail Delivery Group briefing to staff dated last month – gives details of the scheme and says the railcard "goes national in early 2018".

The Rail Delivery Group have not confirmed or denied any details in the memo.

£3.5k legal bill for pair after protected tree was cut down

Storm damaged it, claimed homeowner

By Martin Ford
martin.ford@hertsessexnews.co.uk

TWO people from Nazeing have been left with a legal bill of £3,500 after cutting down a tree.

The willow in the garden of Francesca Schillaci's home in Back Lane, Nazeing was put under a Tree Preservation Order (TPO) in December 2016, following a proposal by Mrs Schillaci to cut it down.

However, in March 2017 tree and landscape officers from Epping Forest District Council (EFDC) noticed the willow tree had been felled.

Mrs Schillaci admitted that she knew the tree was protected but claimed it had been damaged during Storm Doris in February and become a hazard, and had permission to have it cut down.

Tom Casey of Casey Tree Services, based in Nazeing, said that he had cut down the willow tree after Mrs Schillaci incorrectly informed him she had permission from the council.

Photograph

Council officers said they had explained to Mrs Schillaci in a phone call she should arrange for the tree to be inspected by a tree surgeon and send them a photograph of the tree.

At Basildon Magistrates' Court, Mrs Schillaci and Mr

Casey were each found guilty of cutting down the willow tree without authorisation.

The magistrates stated that they found the evidence presented by council officers to be credible and the evidence given by Mrs Schillaci inconsistent, and Mr Casey should have asked her for written proof.

Mrs Schillaci was fined £1,500 and ordered to pay a contribution towards the council's prosecution costs of £1,000.

Mr Casey was given a six-month conditional discharge, ordered to pay £1,000 costs and has been removed from the council's approved list of contractors.

FISHING TACKLE GIANT LAUNCHES NEW SUPERSTORE IN THE HEART OF THE NORTH ESSEX COUNTRYSIDE

Advertising feature

End of the road for anglers! Tackle superstore is off the beaten track - but well worth the journey

5,000 ft<sup>2</sup> of fishing tackle and bait awaits, at Fishing Republic Clavering

Fishing Republic manager Harry Tucker doing what he does best: fishing Clavering's Specimen Carp Lake

To call Fishing Republic's first foray into Essex 'low key' is to underestimate matters: the company's brand new tackle and bait superstore - all 5,000ft<sup>2</sup> of it - is situated not in a town centre, nor even a business park; it's to be found just outside the picturesque village of Clavering, on the Clavering Lakes angling complex.

But, as 100s of local anglers 'in the know' agree: a visit is more than worthwhile. And since the road in question runs past four well-stocked ponds and a fully licensed restaurant, it gives anglers the chance to get their 'fix', and treat the family at the same time.

Leading brand tackle, year-round fishing and great food, too - all just a short hop from the M11
Despite its undeniably 'rural' location, Clavering is just 25 minutes from junction 8 of the M11; around 30 minutes from Bishop's Stortford, Harlow, Haverhill and Cambridge.

The Fishing Republic store is open seven days a week - till late on Thursdays and Fridays. And it's stocked, quite literally, to the rafters - with fishing tackle and bait, clothing, camping equipment and accessories from top manufacturers including Fox, Shimano, Daiwa, Preston, Nash, Korda and many more.

the Clavering Lakes complex is made up of four lakes: a specimen carp lake, a match lake and two mixed 'pleasure' lakes.

The specimen lake has a great winter track record, with a number of verified carp to 30lbs+, as well as specimen sized roach (to nearly 3lbs) and perch up to 5lbs.

The match lake is heavily stocked with a range of species, ensuring impressive bags of fish - to 200lbs+ - all year round.

The Silverfish Lake has 20 swims and regularly produces 20lb-30lb bags of bream, roach, perch, goldfish, crucian carp and tench to pleasure anglers.

The Lower Lake is a mixed coarse fishery stocked with bream, rudd, crucian carp, tench, roach and perch.

Take a free 'tackle test-drive' with Click-Try-Buy

Even a store as large as Fishing Republic Clavering couldn't hope to carry every make, model and variant of tackle. Which is why the company recently introduced Click-Try-Buy, which allows anglers to select the products they're interested in online - at www.fishingrepublic.net - then have those products delivered to their local store for them to appraise before committing to purchase.

And if all that weren't enough...

Anglers and their families will find a warm welcome - and a mouth-watering menu - at the fully licensed Clavering Lodge restaurant, where they can enjoy anything from a light snack to a hearty meal, either in the comfortable restaurant or on the beautifully appointed lakeside terrace.

Madalyn Parker, 11, had to be home-schooled for the first month of term after being denied a place at Stewards Academy

Home schooled due to 'education crisis'

Girl not in catchment area of academy just a mile away

By Michael Mutch
michael.mutch@essexlive.news

A YEAR 7 pupil has said there is an "education crisis" in Harlow after she had to be home-schooled because she was told that she was not in the catchment area for a school just a mile from her home.

Madalyn Parker, 11, who lives in Tithelands on the Katherines estate in Harlow, applied for a place at Stewards Academy for the start of Year 7.

She loves science and wanted to be at a school that specialises in the subject, such as Stewards.

Unfortunately, despite living such a short distance away from the school gates, she was told that she would not be accepted and that she does not live within the school's catchment area.

Her parents were advised to send her to Mark Hall Academy, a school more than five miles away on the other side of town.

Madalyn said: "I believe that when you live in Katherines and are offered a place at Mark Hall it is not right. My parents, family members and family friends also agree that it is wrong."

"When we appealed to get into Stewards we were told that we were not in the catchment area; how are we in the catchment area for a school almost six miles away?"

Travelling to Mark Hall Academy would have been a difficult school run for Madalyn's mother, Sue Parker, who also has to drop Madalyn's sister Emily at Katherines Primary School every morning.

Mrs Parker says getting Madalyn to Mark Hall in time for the first bell would be too difficult and she does not rely on public transport to get her there.

Daughter

She said: "It works out to over 20 miles every day. I have another daughter that I have to drop off at primary school in the morning and would have to travel across town in time to drop off Madalyn at Mark Hall."

"I'm not magic I can't be in two places at once."

"It does not make any sense to send her to school by bus because they are so unreliable. As an adult you can sort of get away with being late at work but it is not as easy for a child who could get detention."

Madalyn's parents appealed for her to be accepted at Stewards and had hoped to hear back from them in the half-term holidays.

The family were left with no choice but to home-school Madalyn from the start of the school year while remaining on the waiting list at Stewards, receiving homework from the school so she did not fall behind on the curriculum.

Mrs Parker said: "Obviously we have got quite limited resources. We have not got a science lab, or a gymnasium, but we are doing our best with keeping in touch with the curriculum in her year."

"We have been in touch with Stewards because with them being our nearest school they have sort of been providing us with the topics they are covering. They have been helpful."

Madalyn's parents had sent off in-year applications to schools in Hertfordshire. She has been accepted to attend Presdales School and Sixth Form in Ware, a ten-mile school run from Tithelands.

Despite the extra distance, her parents say that the commute is much easier due to it not being across town and that a friend can help Madalyn get to school in the morning.

She had her first day at the secondary school last Wednesday, a month after the first day of term and her parents said she is "very excited and settling in well".

Due to all secondary schools in Harlow being academies, Essex County Council (ECC) do not control the catchment areas.

Investment

Councillor Ray Gooding, the ECC's cabinet member for Education, said: "We have an excellent track record of investment in new school places in Essex, including spending about £74 million on 2,500 new places for the new academic year."

"As a result, we were able to offer a record percentage of pupils a place at their parents' preferred primary and secondary schools for this September, which is a fantastic achievement."

"We do not set the admission policies or any 'catchment' areas for any of the secondary schools in Harlow."

"All of the schools are academies and it is therefore the schools which make decisions on admission applications."

Cinders had to be put down after injuring herself following a firework display

Pressure group's plea for silence in fireworks displays

PETA says explosions can lead animals to panic

By Piers Meyler
newsdesk@hertsessexnews.co.uk

HARLOW Council has been asked to end noisy bonfire night bangs during the town's firework display in place of animal-friendly silent fireworks after a frightened horse died during a show.

Peta - People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals - has written to Jon Clempner, the leader of Harlow Council, asking they only use silent fireworks in order to create a stress-free environment for the town's animal and human residents.

Harlow Council's annual free admission fireworks night takes place at the Showground in Harlow Town Park on Sunday November 5 with a 1970s theme.

"Silent fireworks shows deliver all the flash without the frightening noise," Peta Campaigns Strategist Luke Steele wrote. "By using silent fireworks - as several cities in Europe and the US are already doing - Harlow can prevent dogs, cats, wildlife, and humans from being alarmed or disturbed by explosions."

In the letter, Peta notes that following conventional fireworks displays, animal-rescue centres often see an increase in the number of lost dogs, many of whom panic and break loose from leads or jump over fences or even through glass windows in an attempt to get away from the terrifying sounds.

The charity adds that loud displays also scare wild animals, such as deer, causing them to flee onto roads, where they are at great risk of being struck and killed by vehicles and also endanger drivers.

Noise-sensitive children, elderly people, veterans, and those suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder can find the noise of the explosives disturbing, Peta adds.

Panicked

The Star has previously reported how Cinders, a horse at a Harlow sanctuary, had to be put down after damaging her foot while panicking during a firework display.

Mr Steele added: "Because of the numerous concerns surrounding the use of traditional fireworks, we have a suggestion that we hope will spark your interest: pledge to use only silent fireworks at council displays in order to show that a stress-free environment can be created for the town's animal and human residents.

"Richer in colour effects and visual choreography than conventional displays, silent fireworks offer a peaceful celebration for noise-sensitive children, elderly people, and individuals suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder - who are sensitive to and can be deeply disturbed by the noise of the explosives - and they don't put viewers at risk of sustaining hearing loss.

"They're also more animal-friendly. The bangs from regular fireworks are traumatic for wildlife and also cause many domesticated animals great distress. Indeed, animal-rescue centres see an increase in the number of lost dogs following conventional displays.

"Often, these animals go missing after they panic and jump over fences or break loose from leads or tethers, and some even jump through glass windows in an attempt to get away from the terrifying sounds. Many arrive at rescue centres with bloody paws and broken bones.

"By using only silent fireworks in Harlow, you'll be able to deliver all the flash without the frightening noise of conventional displays, thereby improving the quality of life of all the town's residents."

Harlow Council has been approached for comment.

Mr Jeremy Scott, Co-Headteacher and the Directors of Post 16 Education, Mr Stephen Cove and Ms Lauren Thomas, will speak to parents and prospective students in the main hall at 18:15.

ALSO OUT THIS WEEK

Timothée Chalamet as Elio and Armie Hammer as Oliver in Call Me By Your Name

CALL ME BY YOUR NAME (15) ★★★★

If the precipitous act of falling giddily in love could be distilled, the resulting nectar would surely taste as bittersweet and intoxicating as Call Me By Your Name.

Adapted from Andre Aciman's novel, Italian director Luca Guadagnino's sensual, rhapsodic and gorgeously restrained romance is a film to reinvigorate your belief in the power of cinema to perfectly reflect the vagaries of the human condition.

Screenwriter James Ivory spares us neither intense pleasure nor body-shaking anguish as he details the passionate affair between a precocious 17-year-old boy (Timothée Chalamet) and an older man (Armie Hammer) against the sun-kissed backdrop of 1980s northern Italy.

Like Brokeback Mountain, Guadagnino's immaculately crafted picture delicately transcends the sexual orientation of the lead couple, speaking eloquently to anyone who has experienced an irrational rush of blood to the head in the name of amour.

There aren't enough superlatives to lavish on the lead performance of 21-year-old Chalamet, who learned Italian, piano and the choir in three months to perfect embody his lovesick teenager.

Every facet of the character's delirium and despair is captured in exquisite detail on his face, including an extraordinary final unbroken shot over the closing credits that guarantees no one leaves the darkened cinema with dry eyes and an unbroken heart.

BREATHE (12A) ★★★★

Breathe is the inspirational true story of a dapper young man (Andrew Garfield), who contracted polio in 1950s Kenya and was confronted with the grim reality of spending his final days confined to a hospital bed, paralysed from the neck down and reliant on machines to carry out basic bodily functions.

Encouraged to embrace life by his spirited wife (Claire Foy) rather than shrink from it, the patient blazed a defiant trail by venturing outside of the hospital ward in a specially constructed wheelchair fitted with a battery-powered mobile respirator.

There are strong echoes of The Theory Of Everything in Andy Serkis' directorial debut, which is anchored by sterling performances from Garfield and Foy as the married couple, who believe the strength of their love and the enduring power of the human spirit will prove science wrong.

Scriptwriter William Nicholson cuts back and forth between the central love story and medical miracles, delivering gentle tugs to our heartstrings as setbacks embolden the seemingly powerless to risk everything for one more day in the sun.

THOR FINDS HIS FUNNY BONE

In the Asgardian Avenger's third solo outing he loses his hair and his hammer but finds his sense of humour

The astounding success of the Marvel Cinematic Universe has been perpetuated by its ability to constantly renew itself and its characters along the way. And the reason that's happened is a smart recruitment policy when it comes to directors. They hire people who aren't afraid to shake things up and give their characters and storylines a jolt every now and then.

Enter Taika Waititi. Not the biggest name director in the world, but a very smart cookie with a great pedigree (Flight of the Conchords, What We Do In The Shadows, The Hunt For The Wilderpeople) who knows that as much as Marvel films are about scale and spectacle, what stays with you after all that is character quirks, sparky dialogue and silly jokes. And there's plenty to stay with you after watching Thor: Ragnarok.

The opening scene sets the tone. Thor is dangling in chains in some infernal underworld, the prisoner of a towering fire demon. The demon is declaring how he will destroy Asgard, Thor's home, but keeps getting interrupted by the God of Thunder as he swings around while suspended, going in and out of earshot. It ruins the demon's flow and undermines the bombast of it all while providing proper laughs. So you get your amazing visuals, your action, your sense of medium-to-mild peril, but you also get a refreshing hit of humour undercutting it too. Waititi quite rightly takes all this world-building (and destroying) stuff seriously enough, but not too seriously.

So it is throughout the film. All the visual shock and awe is balanced by daft one-liners, intentionally awkward dialogue and knowing nods to the audience.

The plot involves Thor's long-lost (and mostly forgotten) sister Hela (Cate Blanchett, equal parts vamp and camp), the Goddess of Death, returning to claim Asgard as her own and destroy anyone who gets in her way.

Thor (Chris Hemsworth) and Loki (Tom Hiddleston) do get in her way and end up on the junk Planet of Sakaar where Jeff Goldblum lords it up as the Gamesmaster.

A mixture of Roman emperor and game show host (but always very Jeff Goldblum), he presides over gladiatorial games featuring an assortment of brutes and bruisers from around the galaxy. Thor is captured by Valkyrie (Tessa Thompson) who turns him over to Gamesmaster who makes him compete in the games and guess who he has to fight? Yep, his old green-skinned 'friend from work'. They're a long way from saving Asgard from Hela but it's a very funny interlude full of gags and banter before the customary big battle at the film's finale.

Thor: Ragnarok is a blast, a cosmic kaleidoscope of spectacle, action and hilarious silly jokes infused with a mischievous spirit by Waititi. It looks good too, a psychedelic riot of colour inspired by pop culture from the 1960s to 1980s – especially Marvel's 'cosmic' comic books – and soundtracked by big-riffed rock and throbbing synth pop.

Waititi makes the most of his leading man, Chris Hemsworth, subjecting Thor to a physical and psychological battering, and presenting him as a hilarious buffoon prone to making massive cock-ups but redeemed by his good heart. Hemsworth proves his comedic talent – he really is good at this stuff – and makes a great double act with Mark Ruffalo's Hulk/Banner in what, for the middle section of the film, becomes a buddy movie.

There's a whole range of nice supporting roles and some very tasty cameos too. Some will have you raising a smile in delight. Perhaps Cate Blanchett is a little underused and the main plot – her power grab at Asgard – gets lost amid everything else going on but frankly who cares when a film is this much fun.

Thor may lose his hammer and his hair in this film, but he finds his sense of humour and he's much the better for it.

If selling something of high value - like a car - get the cash or wait until the cheque clears before handing over the keys

Words of warning for second-hand sellers

Q WE bought a mattress for £250 which turned out to be too big. Our fault.

We put it up for sale on Gumtree for £125 specifying you would need a large car or a van to collect. Two people showed interest. They asked us the usual questions about condition (unused!), when they could come and look at it, and, as we expected, tried to bargain us down.

But a third person emailed to say she would buy it for £125 without seeing it - only because of illness, she would send a courier to collect and send the money by PayPal.

IN ASSOCIATION WITH

the one you received are sent to sellers on Gumtree and similar sites. They are scams - yours does not even specify a mattress but has vague wording (the spelling and grammar are also bad) and an excuse for not coming to your door.

The sender writes: "Great! please consider all sold kindly remove the ad as i am willing to pay your full asking price because i need to buy it for my cousin asap, i have read through the advert and i'm totally satisfied with it, sadly i would not be able to come personally to collect due to my hearing loss and i'm just recovering from heart surgery so i'm home-bound."

But no one buys a second hand mattress sight unseen.

The email address, now disabled, seems to come from a Kelly Booksy. She does not exist. She promises money via PayPal and collecting via a "courier."

If you were selling a small high-value item - phone or camera - the "courier" would collect it, and you would either find the PayPal transaction reversed or it was from a hacked account and the real owner had been reimbursed. So you lose your goods and money.

There are warnings about this and similar rackets from Gumtree and from the National Fraud Intelligence Bureau.

Always insist on cash for lower value items. For higher value goods such as cars, always wait until cheques clear before handing the item over.

Send your question to askwhich@which.co.uk

FOOD & DRINK

INSPIRED by a passage in Anne Of Green Gables by L. M. Montgomery

INGREDIENTS

(Serves 10)

Cake: 6 eggs (weighed in their shells) then the same weight of unsalted butter, caster sugar and self-raising flour; 2tsp vanilla extract; Small amount of milk, if necessary Icing: 120g unsalted butter; 1kg icing sugar; 1 vanilla pod; 4tbsp milk

METHOD:

- Preheat oven to 160°C/Gas Mark 3. Grease three 20cm sandwich tins and line base with greaseproof paper. Ensure all ingredients are at room temperature.
- Beat the butter and sugar until the mixture is pale in colour and very light in consistency.
- Add the eggs one at a time. Add a spoonful of the flour after each egg to prevent the mixture curdling. Add the vanilla and mix again.
- Sift the remaining flour into the batter and fold in gently. Once it is incorporated (don't overmix it here - stop as soon as you have mixed in all the dry bits of flour), test the consistency. Take a spoonful of the batter and hold it above the bowl. If it is reluctant to drop off the spoon, add a tablespoon of milk and test again.

- Divide between the tins. Level the tops, then place on the same shelf if your oven is big enough. Bake for 20 minutes, until a skewer inserted comes out clean.
- Cool in the tins for five minutes, then tip out and leave to cool completely on a wire rack.
- For the icing: beat the butter until light. Fold in half the icing sugar, and beat until incorporated. Add the rest and beat on until incorporated. Split the vanilla pod and scrape the seeds into the icing. Beat hard for a couple of minutes.
- Add the milk, a tablespoon at a time, and beat until the icing is light and fluffy.
- Put one sponge on a plate, and spread about a quarter of the icing on the top. Layer the others with more icing then scrape a thin layer of icing around the sides of the cake and smooth. Enjoy large slices with tea.

I'LL never understand the fascination with Halloween and I'm scared of fireworks, but I like the bit where I can sip something warming. Here's a handful of pick-me-ups to recover from the autumn cold of Halloween, Bonfire Night, an afternoon on the football terraces or a walk with the dog.

Pumpkin Spice Chocolate Liqueur (£15.99, Wine Rack, 17% abv) If anything is guaranteed to get you in the spirit of Halloween it is this. I'll even decide to like Halloween if I can have a sip of this treat every now and again. Natural pumpkin juice is given a lift with chocolate and caramel and it has overtones of cinnamon, clove, vanilla and a spike of

A taste for literature

FOOD WRITER KATE YOUNG IS LITERALLY COOKING THE BOOKS, ELLA WALKER FINDS OUT MORE

Tea, cake and a good book - a perfect afternoon for Kate Young, right, her new recipe book

The Little Library Cookbook
KATE YOUNG

If I read a book that doesn't mention food, I think, 'What are they doing?!"' toes - it's essentially a fan service!"

Even making Edmund's pillow-y-pink Turkish delight in The Lion, The Witch And The Wardrobe didn't worry her. "It's just so time-consuming!" she admits. "It's as faithful as I can possibly make it, while being the thing I really want to eat."

There are a few things she wouldn't attempt though, like the huge pies for hundreds of people ("Well, mice,") in Brian Jacques' Redwall series. "I hate wasting food, and when it's made for the sake of being made."

Fundamentally, she explains, the recipes in The Little Library Cookbook are not gimmicks. It's and met Master Distiller Joanne Moore who has crafted a gin which can be sipped on its own (I did that) or enjoyed in a cocktail (I did that too). The nose is heady with almonds and cherries - it reminded me of those little Mr Kipling slices. Try this recipe created by Greenall's gin curator Alix Walker. Take It Sloe Toddy: Pour 50ml sloe gin into a cup then gently warm 100ml cloudy apple juice and 50ml orange juice with two cloves and a cinnamon stick. Carefully pour into the cup.

The Appleton Estate Rare Blend 12 Year Old (RRP £38, Tesco, Waitrose, thewhiskyexchange.com, 43% abv) is made at Jamaica's oldest distillery. My friend is a rum lover and she was giddy to see this bottle in my kitchen and grabbed herself a glass. The rum is distilled from molasses and has a nutty, spicy palate with a vanilla creaminess. Make a Jamaican Honey Soother by pouring two parts of the Appleton Estate, 1/4 part honey and 1/2 part fresh lemon juice into a cocktail shaker half filled with ice cubes. Shake well and strain into a glass. If you don't have a shaker improvise with a large glass jar and lid (clean, of course!).

Also in my glass....
Warner Edwards Botanical Garden Honeybee Gin (RRP £40, warneredwards.com, fortnumandmason.com, 43% abv) is exactly what it says not about hosting themed parties and presenting food that looks accurate but tastes rotten.

"It's a real, usable cookbook," says Kate earnestly. "The recipes aren't the imaginary dishes in books - it's the treacle tart rather than fizzing whizbees." Although she did invent hot honeycomb doughnuts that burst in the mouth, like the pop cakes from Enid Blyton's The Magic Faraway Tree.

"I hope people read it and go, 'That's a lovely story, but I would happily just make chicken and tarragon without needing to tell everyone it's from Anna Karenina.'"

For Kate, the process always starts with reading.

"Every time I find a mention of food, I turn down a page; so all my books are really dogeared," she says with a smile. "If I read a book that doesn't mention food, I think, 'What are they doing?'"

"So much of what we do centres around food," she muses. "There's something really interesting in the moments we come together and sit down and eat, and the conversations we have. I always find it quite weird when people don't eat in books."

Kate comes from a family of cooks and doesn't remember ever not cooking: "Cooking is what we do and food is what we talk about. We're planning dinner for four weeks' time while we're eating breakfast!"

Cooking, she says, is her obsession: "Even if I'm really tired, I still like thinking about it - and then eating toast."

■ The Little Library Cookbook by Kate Young, photography Lean Timms, is published by Anima, an imprint of Head of Zeus, priced £25 on the gin - made from honey. I expected it to be super-sweet but the sweetness is subtle. The nose has floral aromas with coriander and citrus; and honey, pine and spice come through in the mouth. Warner Edwards has a strong ethos to nurture nature and the gin is released in partnership with the Royal Horticultural Society. Each bottle includes a packet of wildflower seeds to encourage bee-friendly spaces and honey from the distillery's own beehives was used to create the gin. For a Bees Knees dissolve two teaspoons of honey in 50ml of gin, add 10ml of fresh lemon juice, 20ml of orange juice, top up with ice. Shake and pour into a glass.

KATE YOUNG'S career started with treacle tart after she made Harry Potter's favourite treat for friends, who told her she should start a blog about the bakes in fiction

INGREDIENTS: (SERVES 10)

For the pastry: 250g plain flour; 2tbsp icing sugar; Zest of 1 lemon; Pinch of salt; 175g butter, chilled and cubed; 1 egg yolk

For the filling: 600g golden syrup; 1/4tsp ground ginger; 150g fresh fine breadcrumbs; Zest and juice of 1 lemon; 1 egg, beaten

METHOD:

1. For the pastry: combine the flour, icing sugar, lemon zest and salt in a bowl. Rub in the cold butter until the mixture resembles breadcrumbs. Add the egg yolk and one to two tablespoons of very cold water. Combine with your hands until the mixture comes together into a dough. Turn onto a lightly floured work surface and form into a ball. Don't work the mixture too much or your pastry won't be crisp. Wrap in clingfilm and pop in the fridge for half an hour.

2. Roll the pastry on a lightly floured surface. You want a 30cm circle that is around the thickness of a pound coin.
3. Transfer pastry to a fluted tart tin. Use a small ball of spare dough to push it into place (your nails may cut the pastry), making sure it goes right into the corners. Patch any tears with extra dough. Lightly prick the base with a fork and return to the fridge to chill for a further 30 minutes. Preheat your oven to 190°C/Gas Mark 5 and heat a baking sheet in the middle of the oven.
4. Line the chilled case with greaseproof paper and fill with baking beans or uncooked rice. Place in the oven, on the baking sheet, for 15 minutes. Remove the paper and beans and bake for a further five minutes, until golden.

5. For the filling: heat the golden syrup and ground ginger in a saucepan over a low heat until hot, but not boiling. Remove from the heat. Stir in the breadcrumbs, lemon zest and juice and beaten egg until just combined. Pour into the pastry case.
6. Bake the tart in the oven for 30-35 minutes until the filling is set and the pastry golden. Cool on a wire rack for 15 minutes before removing from the tin and serving warm.

WHO doesn't love a warming supper of toad-in-the-hole? All that crisp batter and succulent sausages. The inspiration comes from The Secret Diary Of Adrian Mole Aged 13 3/4, by Sue Townsend

INGREDIENTS: (SERVES 4)

Batter: 120g plain flour; 3 eggs; Pinch of salt; 300ml milk

Toad: 2tbsp butter; 1tbsp flavourless oil (or beef dripping if you have some); 8 fat sausages; 5 stalks rosemary (optional); 10 sprigs thyme (optional)

Gravy: 1tbsp butter (or oil, if you prefer); 3 small red onions, sliced into semicircles; 1tbsp brown sugar; 2tsp Worcestershire sauce; 1tbsp plain/all-purpose flour; 500ml beef stock; Salt and pepper

METHOD:

1. Preheat the oven to 200°C/Gas Mark 6. Tip the flour into a bowl, make a well in the centre, crack in the eggs and whisk. Add the salt and then whisk in the milk until you have a smooth, runny batter. Set aside for 15 minutes, while you cook the sausages.

2. Add the fats to a pan, heat until bubbling and fry the sausages over a medium heat until they are cooked.
3. Scatter the herbs over the sausages, stalks and all. Pour the

ADRIAN MOLE TOAD IN THE HOLE

5. Add the sugar, stirring until dissolved. Add Worcestershire sauce, and stir. Sprinkle in the flour and stir to coat the onion.

Pour in about 100ml of the stock and whisk until the onions is smooth. Add the rest of the liquid and bring to the boil, stirring until thick. Set aside and warm when you're ready to serve. Season to taste.

6. Remove the toad-in-the-hole from the oven and serve immediately. Ensure everyone has plenty of crispy bits from the sides and a generous slug of the gravy.

HOME IS ALL POMP-ED UP FOR A SALE

If you're a fan of The Proms then you'll know that every year it reaches a flag-waving climax with a rousing rendition of Edward Elgar's Pomp and Circumstance, accompanied by an orgy of bunting and the singing of Land of Hope and Glory.

The piece was written in 1901 by Elgar and, as well as being a permanent fixture of the proms every year since, has also been adopted by many football and rugby fans as an unofficial national anthem.

Elgar wrote March No.1 in D while living at this house, which he rented for five years from 1898 and is where he also wrote several of his other famous works including The Dream of Gerontius and Sea Pictures.

The living room

Edward Elgar

He loved Birchwood Lodge so much that he tried to buy it at one point, without success, and told friends he liked to work there because its seclusion meant he could forget what day of the week it was.

Set in the Malvern Hills, its garden offers views over the local countryside with Worcester Cathedral in one direction, and the Cotswolds in the other.

The cottage is now for sale after 34 years with the same couple, who are now selling up to downsize and be nearer their family.

It has five bedrooms - one of which was Elgar's study - plus two reception rooms and a two-acre garden and paddocks. For sale at £540,000 via agent Andrew Grant on 01684 563136.

The pool and ocean view at the former Malibu home of talk show host Johnny Carson

Late-night talk show host Johnny Carson was a standout among entertainers, to which his 30-year career on air is testament.

He sent Americans to bed each night with smiles on their faces and was instrumental in boosting the careers of many entertainers we still enjoy today such as Jay Leno, David Letterman, Ellen DeGeneres, Roseanne Barr and Jerry Seinfeld.

An invitation to appear on Johnny's The Tonight Show was the number one goal of most up-and-coming artists who knew that if they made it there, they could look forward to a successful career.

Though his TV success, where his quick wit and cool sophisticated comedy appeared to define the man, off stage Johnny was a totally different person. He described himself as a loner who liked his life that way.

He attended few social functions, only those important for his career, and even then kept mostly to himself and left early.

He never spoke to the guests appearing on The Tonight Show either prior to the show or afterwards, but instead prepared about 20 questions in advance and didn't see the stars until they were introduced and sat down across from his desk on stage.

Johnny loved to play golf and for a number of years owned a home in Bel Air.

However, in the mid 1980s he bought a four-acre, cliff-top home above the celebrity-studded Point Dume community in Malibu overlooking the Pacific Ocean where he lived with third wife, Alexis, until his death in 2005.

Alexis continued to live there until 2007 when she sold it to film producer Sidney Kimmel and his wife, Caroline. The Kimmers restored it to its original plan and have recently put it on the market.

Nestled within four acres of lush gardens, the two-bedroom, 7,083sqft main house designed by architect Ed Niles is a study

Ever wondered where effervescent chat show host Graham Norton goes to recharge his batteries?

Regular breaks at his luxury beach house on the East Sussex coast have proved just the ticket for Graham and his two beloved pet pooches, Bailey and Madge.

Now the six-bedroom seaside pad is on the market.

The contemporary, three-storey home in the exclusive Cooden Beach

GRAHAM DID LIKE TO BE BESIDE THE SEASIDE

area of Bexhill-on-Sea features a large landscaped garden, a swimming pool and its own private beach.

This distinctive, teak-clad property has wrap-around balconies from which to enjoy amazing sea views across the English Channel and a stunning master bedroom with dressing room and en suite bathroom.

The 54-year-old has owned the property since 2009.

His seaside haven is for sale at £2.3m via M&W Property (0203 621 4560).

SARAH SELLS UP FOR A LIFE IN LA

Former Girls Aloud singer Sarah Harding has been tweeting pictures of herself in the recording studio recently, suggesting a new solo single may be in the offing.

The 35-year-old has been busy on the romantic front too, after appearing on Celebrity Big Brother in August, during which she got steamy with fellow housemate Chad Johnson despite supposedly having a boyfriend waiting for her outside.

She subsequently began dating Chad, who is a reality TV star in the US, and is said to be moving to Los Angeles to live with him.

Sarah Harding's former house

She'll have some money to take with her, too. Sarah, below, has just sold her house in the village of Cadsden, Buckinghamshire, for just shy of £1m.

It overlooks the adjacent golf course and, its brochure says, offers "seclusion and privacy" as well as four bedrooms and two bathrooms.

The property also includes a shaker-style kitchen, a lounge with William Morris-style wallpaper and an open fire and sun balconies off two of the bedrooms. There is also a hot tub at the back of the house, a terraced garden, a front garden and drive.

Sarah, right, bought the property in 2008 with her then-fiancé DJ Tom Crane. It was her first house after moving out of her London flat, where she lived during her Girls Aloud days.

LINDA'S RAGS TO RICHES CONVERSION

The exterior of the Primrose Hill property which would set you back £28.5m

Linda Plant is the 'Queen of Mean' interviewer on BBC1 show The Apprentice. She is a long-term friend of the show's lynchpin Lord Alan Sugar and, like him, built up a business empire from nothing, starting out selling clothes from a market stall.

Edward VIII

Her latest project is this house star-studded Primrose Hill, London, which is on the market. It's a seven-bedroom Art Deco house which she has given a luxury makeover and added several features. They include underfloor heating, a his and hers treatment room, integrated music and video systems in every room, a gym and a temperature-controlled wine cellar.

The property also comes with history. It is where King Edward VIII is said to have wooed his future wife, the US socialite Wallis Simpson before he abdicated from the throne in 1936.

For sale at £28.5m with Aston Chase on 0207 724 4724.

YOUR GARDEN

With Diarmuid Gavin

A plot of any shape or size can sustain a tree – and every garden or courtyard should have one. But the trick is to choose a species that will be happy and look right in the space available.

So rule number one, always find out from the supplier what the eventual height and spread of the tree will be.

If there's no space in your plot for spreading branches, there are plenty of fastigiated or columnar trees – these are tall slim beanpoles which will reach for the sky and not your boundaries.

Similarly, if you don't want a tree that's going to dominate through its height, there are many beautiful low growers.

Whether you are vertically or horizontally challenged, need a specimen for a lawn or something nice for a pot on a balcony, there are lots of interesting choices available. Here are a few to mull over...

Branch out

Choose a variety of tree that complements your plot and enhances its natural beauty

Every garden should have a tree

LIQUIDAMBAR Sweetgum

Liquidambar or Sweet Gum, is a majestic tree, reaching over 20 metres in height when fully matured.

It produces one of the best autumnal displays when its five-lobed leaves – a bit like a maple – turn purple, crimson and burgundy.

If you love this tree but like most of us don't have the space, an alternative is 'Gum Ball'. Gum Ball is a dwarf shrubby version of the tree – it is also sometimes grafted onto a standard stem to create a lollipop shape. It will grow to around 3m over time, with a compact, rounded head.

Shrubs and trees which can be kept tightly clipped into topiary shapes are always good candidates for the small garden.

Laurel, bay, yew, holly, Ionicera nitida and privet can all be transformed into a neat lollipop, pyramid or other shapes, and kept to size with a regular pruning regime.

They are best suited to a formal-style garden and work well in front gardens.

PYRUS SALICIFOLIA Weeping pear

Pyrus salicifolia, the weeping pear, is a pendulous small tree with soft mintgreen leaves.

This is a really pretty tree, which makes an elegant focal point in the centre of the lawn or gravel area where it can be admired.

CORNUS KOUSA

Miss Satomi

Cornus kousa 'Miss Satomi' is a good choice where you have room for a tree to spread laterally but you don't want it to grow tall.

Most of us are familiar with the colourful stems of dogwood in winter but Miss Satomi is better known for its deep pink flowers.

The branches are outstretched, and leaves turn purple and deep red in autumn.

It could also be fan-trained against a wall, which is another good way of incorporating trees and shrubs into small spaces.

Prune those branches and you can save them for Bonfire Night

Start your preparations for winter

■ Fancy some greens for winter? Sow and grow winter salads, such as rocket, under cloches or in the greenhouse.

■ It's a good time to prune. Inspect trees and shrubs for dead or diseased branches and remove them. Remember to leave acers and birches until mid-winter as at any other time they can bleed sap. Save twigs and branches for Bonfire night.

■ Tender plants, such as salvias, need to be dug up, potted and put in a frost-free conservatory for the winter.

■ Ponds need attention before winter sets in. Remove and clean the pump if you have one. Thin out oxygenating plants if they have taken over, and remove old leaves and debris which have sunk to the bottom.

■ Lift pumpkins for Halloween. Plant out autumn onion sets and garlic bulbs.

■ Have you finished pruning your roses? Bush roses are best done now to keep their height down for winter. Rambling roses should also be trimmed before winter storms.

■ Check tree stakes and ties on newly planted trees to ensure they are firm for winter.

■ Pots and containers can get waterlogged during heavy downpours – one tip is to stand them on bricks so that the water can easily drain away.

It's your last chance to lift those pumpkins in time for Halloween

PRUNUS MUME BENICHIDORI Japanese apricot

If your heart's desire is a spring blossom, there are a number of cherries that fit the bill.

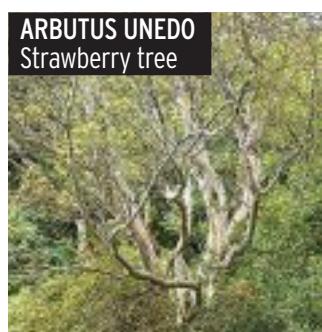

There's the tall slim Amanogawa, or Cheal's weeping cherry, which grows to around 3m and will be covered in double pink flowers come April and May.

The Fuji cherries are suitable for container growing and small spaces - these are the epitome of Japanese delicacy with soft early spring blooms and a blaze of autumnal foliage colour.

For a dazzling flourish of brilliant colour to cheer you up in February, choose the flowering apricot - Prunus mume Beni-chidori.

This has delicious, almond-scented, deep pink blossoms on bare stems in February and would look stunning in a pot on a balcony or sheltered patio.

ARBUTUS UNEDO Strawberry tree

Arbutus unedo is a beautiful, small evergreen tree with much to recommend it all year round - glossy green leaves, a light mahogany-coloured luxurious bark, small, white urn-shaped flowers and a strawberry-like fruit.

As the fruit are formed from last year's flowers, you will often find them and the flowers flourishing at the same time, which is highly unusual.

Combined with an interesting growth habit, this tree makes a great specimen and grows well in both dry and heavy clay soils and it tolerates pollution so thrives in the city.

For the extra bijou gardens, there is a dwarf version - 'compacta'.

ASK DIARMUID

QI have two lovely Cox's apple trees and a Granny Smith. Every year I try a different method in the hope of storing the apples so I can enjoy them during the winter months.

I have placed them, not touching, on wooden shelves in the shed. I have bought proper fruit boxes from the market with liners, I've wrapped them in newspaper in the loft which is reasonably warm.

But nothing I do makes the

You could try storing apples in the fridge to help them keep fruit last. Have you any suggestions?

Janet

AYOU are doing it by the book so it's hard to say why your apples aren't keeping.

In my experience, Granny Smiths in general would be better 'keepers' than Cox's, and a good rule of thumb is that late-season fruiters last the longest.

You describe your loft as warm - they should be stored somewhere cool for better results. I can only advise that you continue to experiment with new locations.

Perhaps you could store some of them in the fridge and see how that works. Good luck!

PLANT OF THE WEEK

COLCHICUM NAKED LADY

Have you seen any naked ladies recently? I am referring to the garden variety of course!

So-called because the stem and flower emerge in autumn bare of leaves, Colchicum are also known as autumn crocus because they look similar.

Plant in July or August for autumn flowering - leaves emerge in spring and die down in the summer.

Our native Colchicum autumnale grows wild in damp meadows, and in the garden they prefer moisture-retentive soil. The showiest of species is C. speciosus 'Album' with beautiful pure white flowers.

A word of caution - they are highly toxic if ingested and the bulbs have sometimes been mistaken for edible wild garlic, leading to accidental poisoning.

HOME STYLE

With Lesley Taylor

NEW SCANDI CHIC

A dining table in a light wood - such as this from the Jensen furniture range at Taylors Etc - will anchor a dining room

Say farewell to 'hygge' and hello to the next generation of Scandinavian design

Cast your mind back 12 months when the interior design world was dominated by one word: Hygge. There was no escaping it; bookshops were flooded with lengthy tomes on the subject, homeware ranges inspired by it hit the shops and seemingly everyone wanted a slice of Danish cosiness in their own home.

Fast forward a year and the term has pretty much disappeared. But that doesn't mean our obsession with all things Scandi has gone. Like all good love affairs, it has evolved into something even more beautiful. And it can be achieved with just a few small additions.

COSY QUARTERS

Chances are, if any part of your home got the Hygge treatment last year it was your living room. And why not?

Introduce some warm wooden accessories into the bathroom, like these from the Mya collection from Burgbad

Bedroom aside, it's the one room where you are legitimately allowed to put your feet up and simply relax.

But this year the Scandi vibe is spreading to all other rooms in the house - bathroom and kitchen included.

Adding a Scandi vibe in the bathroom is simple and there are options to suit all budgets.

If you're going for a full bathroom renovation, consider using wood-effect tiles to introduce a natural feel which is popular in Scandinavian design.

Wooden flooring in the bathroom has always been considered something of a no-no because of the room's high moisture content. However, today's wood-effect porcelain tiles are a fantastic alternative because they give the look of real hardwood but boast all the benefits of a porcelain tile.

Use accessories to give a new feel to an existing suite. I particularly love the Mya range by Burgbad. It is filled with practical accessories - such as wooden towel rails and vanity units - designed to add an element of warmth.

If your bathroom is too compact for new large addition, some fluffy white towels and large candles will give your room a toasty feel.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

A lot of Scandinavian design inspiration comes from natural materials and textures. A wooden dining table is the perfect anchor in your dining area; you can dress it with candles, thick napkins and a clay tableware set from somewhere like Broste Copenhagen, for a truly authentic Scandinavian finish.

Wooden shelves add a practical element to the kitchen - and they look pretty lovely too

Fancy a new cutlery set? Forgo stainless steel in favour of a dramatic black collection or even a vibrant gold set which will both make a statement in your dining area.

Scandinavian design is practical as well as good-looking, and this is perfect for the kitchen. One of the easiest ways to get a Scandinavian vibe in this most important of rooms is to add some rustic shelving which is ideal for storage.

The kitchen is also the perfect place to add some greenery with a potted plant or two. Bringing nature indoors is thought to lower stress levels and boost creativity - ideal if you fancy whipping up a showstopping bake or extravagant three-course meal - and

The Baked Tile Company has a wide range of wood-effect tiles which are ideal for use in the bathroom

LESLEY'S TIPS FOR SCANDI STYLE

1. Consider all rooms in the home.
2. Natural elements, such as wood, are key.
3. Opt for budget-friendly accessories to bring the look together.
4. Always choose timeless big-ticket items.
5. Experiment by teaming new textures and materials together.

plants look lovely too. If you don't trust yourself with a real plant, there are some gorgeous artificial varieties. And if you're not happy with the pot it comes in, change it. There are some very reasonable pots on the market or should you so desire, go all Demi Moore in Ghost, and have a go at making your own.

WHEELS

SEAT has always relished being seen as the sporty arm of the VW empire. The third generation of the Leon, a worthy challenger to the parent group's Golf, is no exception, with new styling, and significant revisions across the range.

There are three body styles: five-door hatchback, three-door SC, and ST estate.

The car uses the same platform as the Audi A3, Skoda Octavia and Golf itself, and is one of the most spacious cars in its class despite have a shorter wheelbase.

There is more passenger space and luggage capacity – an extra 39 litres in the boot and 14mm more head and rear knee room.

It does look sporty, particular the FR version driven here with its 15mm lower profile, wider bonnet, revised front bumper and wider, more prominent trapezoidal front grille and full LED headlights with daytime running, dedicated FR bumpers and FR-stamped aluminium door sills.

It also features independent rear suspension and stiffer springs and dampers for a more engaging drive, plus smart alloy wheels.

There are also a range of petrol and diesel engines, all offering good economy and low emissions. They include new 1.0 TSI engine and increased power for the 1.4 EcoTSI and 1.6 TDI units and the powerful, but frugal 2.0-litre unit in this car.

The latest model also offers a wide range of new technology including the wireless charger, traffic jam assist and traffic sign recognition. The electronic parking brake allows room for the phone charger to be situated on the central console.

The interior continues the sporty look with neat flat-bottomed multi-function steering wheel, bold dials, intuitive central control screen set in the centre of the dash and typically high quality and robust fittings and trim.

The dark interior is nicely offset with brushed satin trim. The multi-adjustable front sports seats are firm but comfortable. The touch screen allows control of connectivity, navigation and infotainment features, plus easy integration of multiple smartphones via Apple Car Play, Mirror Link and Google Android Auto.

Generous standard equipment list includes electric windows, air conditioning, remote central locking, touchscreen control, electric door mirrors plus on this model, multi-coloured interior ambient lighting, dual-zone climate control, front and rear parking sensors, electric folding door mirrors, front sports seats.

Safety kit comprises a full range of airbags, assisted braking and stability control.

On this model the Drive Profile allows the driver to select driving modes: Normal, Sport, Eco plus an Individual option, depending on whether you are looking for economy or performance.

There is plenty of performance from the 184ps two-litre diesel engine. Right up there in hot hatch territory, it delivers sharp acceleration, hitting 60mph in 7.5 seconds, while the upgraded suspension means the car handles beautifully, particularly when pushed hard.

The slight downside is the ride is firm and suffers on lesser road surfaces.

The steering is sharp and the car feels nimble and poised whenever asked the question.

Economy is good with an official 62.8mpg looking nearer 52.8 in reality, while CO<sub>2</sub> emissions of 118g/km means taxation and benefit in kind taxation won't break the bank.

Mated to a six-speed manual gearbox the refined diesel offers an engaging drive, whether pottering around, cruising on the motorway or having fun.

As a hatchback it is practical with folding rear seats increasing the standard luggage substantially. There are also plenty of cubbyholes and cup holders.

The Leon has always been a fine car – a real alternative and cheaper than the Golf and the latest version is better than ever.

Chapman's praise for key man Read

Striker scores late goal to earn a point for Hawks

By Jay Williams
sportsdesk@hertsessexnews.co.uk

HARLOW Town manager Danny Chapman hailed the importance of Alex Read after the striker grabbed a late equaliser in a 1-1 draw against Margate.

With just a minute of stoppage time left on the clock, Read collected a long free-kick which dropped into the box and struck a low shot on the swivel past former Chelsea goalkeeper Lenny Pidgeley to earn Harlow a point.

It was the 27-year-old's seventh goal of the season and his performances have helped keep Harlow away from further danger at the foot of the Bostik League Premier Division.

Hawks boss Chapman said: "He is massively important. We have been playing Alex a little bit deeper recently with Reece [Dobson] further up and I think it's worked."

Best player

"I think the last two or three games, Alex has been our best player. His ball retention has been better."

Read demonstrated strength and skill with his goal as he shrugged off the Margate defenders to collect Jeya Siva's speculative long free-kick and net the last-gasp equaliser.

Harlow fans will be very familiar with Read's goal scoring exploits now but Chapman was keen to emphasise how well he took the goal.

He added: "It's not a great free-kick, through the conditions the wind has taken it away but what Alex did really well was that he got his body into the defender; he's clamber back up the table.

Currently 22nd out of 24, the Hawks have a cushion of nine points separating them from bottom side Worthing but Chapman insists that the draw against Margate was a boost for morale.

He said: "We're slowly taking steps back to where we want to be. We're in a position which we're not used to being in.

"The year before last we were promoted, last year we were always pushing for a play-off spot so it's new to everyone and we've all got to get our heads round that.

"The only way that we're going to get out of the position that we're in is by working together.

"Keep working hard, keep sticking to the way that we want to play and that's the only way that we'll get out of it."

Teen triathlete Kai takes first steps to GB call-up

PASSMORES student Kai Boggon has taken the first steps on his dream of one day representing Great Britain on the big stage, after winning the largest junior triathlon in the country at Hever Castle in Kent.

The 14-year-old took his place among a strong field of 280 young athletes for the event, which started in the lake in front of the castle.

The swim consisted of a 300m circuit of the lake and Kai exited the water in a fantastic joint first place.

He left the transition area with a massive lead of more than 30 seconds.

The bike section is normally his strongest discipline, and Kai absolutely smashed the 8k around the castle grounds, coming back into transition two with a 50 second lead.

With another swift transition, Kai began the 2.5k run full of confidence – and there was no looking back as he kept his lead all the way to the finish to take gold by a huge 58 second margin. Kai completed the race in a very impressive time of 39min 29sec, with his proud family and coaches watching.

To cap a tremendous season, which saw him finish first in all the East region races bar one and make it into the East Region team for the Regional UK championships where he was a superb 12th, Kai has been selected for the British Triathlon Academy squad.

Kai has also already booked his place in the ITU World Triathlon championships in Abu Dhabi where he took age group gold last year.

Kai's running coach, John Stow, from Woodford Green and Essex Ladies AC said: "Kai has had an outstanding triathlon season and in my eyes is a future Olympian at this event.

"Through all is hard work and excellent results Kai is a great inspiration to the younger athletes within his training group. He is a great role model."

Harlow sides have weekend of victories

IT proved a successful weekend for all three of Harlow Rugby Club's men's teams in league matches.

The first XV and the Saints won by comfortable margins while an injury depleted Rams side held on for a narrow victory.

On a blustery afternoon at Layton Park, Harlow set out to protect their unbeaten London Two North East home record agains Cantabrigian.

They started well with an early penalty slotted over by Danny Smith and a try from Michael Weston to lead 8-0.

Within the next ten minutes a powerful run by Scott Stalley presented the supporting Weston with his second try to extend the advantage to 13-0.

Two further tries by Matt Dodds and Ryan McClone and a conversion by Smith put Harlow in the driving at 25-0, with the try bonus point in the bag with just half an hour gone.

At the end of the first half Canterbury scored a converted try to make it 25-7.

Harlow started the second half well with number eight Kain Claridge peeling away from the back of a scrum to score, Smith adding the extras for 32-7.

After 64 minutes scrum-half Charlie Woodington was yellow carded for dangerous play. Canterbury capitalised by hitting Harlow with two quick tries to narrow the gap to 32-19.

Harlow, with Woodington back on the field, applied the pressure with Stalley's darting run through the opposition defence resulting in the sixth try, which was converted by Smith.

Hat-trick

The try of the game then came from Weston, who ran the length of the pitch, crashing through tackle after tackle before completing his hat-trick.

The visitors went over for a late score making it 44-26.

First team manager Kevin Ellis received his life membership tie from club president Alan Price – a fitting tribute to a club volunteer who has made a massive contribution over many years.

The Rams travelled to Romford for their Merit League fixture.

The pace of the Harlow's play soon exposed gaps in the Romford defence, with Owen Blissett forcing his way over for the first score, and Chay Clark adding the extras. This was closely followed by the second Harlow score for Rob Mackie.

Romford replied with a score of their own on the stroke of half-time to make it 12-5 at the break.

Barrie Hussie brushed aside the tacklers before crashing over the line to extend the lead to 17-5.

Romford hit back, forcing their way over from the restart, but Alfie Clark then stepped through the defence for the fourth Harlow score, with Romford making it 22-17 late on. Saints beat Loughton 46-5.
